Student Organizations

What do students remember most about college? Is it the classes, professors, campus life, or food? What most graduates remember are the people we meet during our college days... students, faculty, and staff. Whether in a class, organization, or just spending time with one another, people who become close friends, are what we remember most. A great way to meet friends is through one of our 100-plus student organizations. Organizations do so much—they are student-led and student-run, so empowerment is a fundamental aspect. Student organizations need you to discover, join, participate, lead, and leave a legacy! Take advantage of the diverse organizations La Salle offers!

Leadership

Leadership development is key to your overall experience at La Salle University. The skills that you build and enhance will make a difference in your life now and in the future. We encourage you to develop your leadership by attending workshops, summits, conferences, and more. We offer dozens of opportunities for this key aspect of your experience.

Involvement

We all want to get the most for our investments of time, resources, and effort. At La Salle, we encourage you to take FULL advantage of all that you have invested in, especially in terms of our 100-plus organizations and activities. In a sense, you have already paid for these things; why not get involved? At La Salle University, we offer you options for involvement, from a slightly engaged experience such as attending a show or movie, to more engagement in student organizations or cultural experiences, to optimized engagement, such as leading and executing plans and events of student organizations and committees. By increasing your involvement and engagement, you are making the most of your investment of time and resources at La Salle. So, take advantage of all you have a right to—dive right into involvement!
